The Department of Psychiatry offers a course to Med II students and a clinical clerkship to Med III students, as well as clinical electives to interns and residents.

PSYT 227 Psychopathology 32.36; 3 cr.
The course consists of two parts, the first covers the psychological aspects of normal and abnormal behaviors, and the second deals with the classification and pathophysiology of psychiatric disorders. Annually.

PSYT 252 Clinical Clerkship in Psychiatry 0.180.
A clinical clerkship in which third year medical students spend one month working up psychiatric patients and attending morning rounds on an inpatient psychiatric service where they are supervised by an attending psychiatrist. Students also attend psychiatry clinics in the outpatient department where they see new and old cases. The rotation also includes seminars dealing with psychopathology, case presentations and discussions, interview techniques and basic psychotherapy, as well as psychopharmacology. Seminars are held daily and are supervised by the full-time faculty. One month.
