CAMES' goal is to enhance understanding of the Middle East and encourage informed scholarship of the region in all academic disciplines. This is achieved through its program offerings, cooperation with other institutions, its publications, and a lecture series that it sponsors throughout the year. CAMES is an interdepartmental, interdisciplinary unit with the educational aim of assisting students to acquire a sound grounding in an academic discipline and in the languages and civilizations of the Middle East. CAMES achieves this objective through its MA degree program--a two-year thesis program. Students at CAMES are required to complete a minimum of 21 credit hours in courses numbered 300 and above in addition to a thesis. All CAMES students are required to take the core course, MEST 301. Students who are not native speakers of Arabic are required to complete 6 credits of Arabic language study; no more than 9 credits of Arabic language instruction may be taken for credit toward the MA degree. Students may take their remaining courses in topics related to Middle Eastern Studies at departments other than CAMES.

The program focuses on current methodologies and approaches to the general field of Middle Eastern scholarship. Students structure their own course of study in such areas as contemporary Middle Eastern history, archaeology, the social sciences, and Arabic language and literature. The courses and the thesis requirements encourage students' critical and independent thinking and the undertaking of analytical in-depth research. CAMES is committed to the study of the Arabic language and offers courses at all levels in coordination with the Department of Arabic and Near Eastern Languages as well as a six-week intensive course in the summer.

Courses Offered

MEST 240 Introduction to Lebanese Arabic 5.0; 3 cr.

This course is for foreign speakers of Arabic only. The course builds proficiency in Lebanese Arabic through the introduction of the grammatical features of the Lebanese dialect and the practice of interactive functional skills, including listening comprehension, conversation tasks, and vocabulary building. For undergraduate students. Consent of instructor required. Each semester.

MEST 301 Introduction to Middle Eastern Studies 3.0; 3 cr.

A general course in modern Middle Eastern studies designed to introduce students to the interdisciplinary study of the Middle East. Faculty from the various departments associated with CAMES such as History and Archaeology, Philosophy, Arabic, Social and Behavioral Sciences, Economics, and Political Science are asked to present a seminar that illustrates the approaches and methodologies used in their respective fields to study the region. Consent of instructor required. Annually.
